Dear Sir or Madam:

I am completing a doctoral dissertation (or Masters thesis) at the New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University entitled "________________________", and would like to obtain permission to reprint a figure from the following article:

The exact figure to be reprinted is:

The requested permission extends to all revisions and editions of my dissertation, prospective publication of my dissertation by ProQuest Dissertation Express, and reproduction and electronic display by Alfred University.

If these arrangements meet with your approval, please sign and return to me in the self-addressed return envelope. Your signing of this letter confirms ownership of the copyrights of the above-described material. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

(Your Name)

Instructions for permission letters:

1. Make sure you find the name and address of the copyright owner. In scientific work, it is more often the publisher than the author, with the exception of a thesis. Some publishers charge a fee. If you are pressed for time and the copyright permission contact is not clearly indicated, call the publisher/organization to obtain the name of the person to contact. Otherwise, your request may be lost in the system. You can also determine the fee with a phone call, and include payment with your request.

2. State clearly the name of our university and your dissertation's/thesis title.

3. If appropriate, attach a copy of the figures, tables, pictures, and etc., and say "See attached". Your objective is to eliminate any ambiguities and to be sure the permission encompasses the full scope of your need.

4. If you have multiple requests, it’s a good idea to include separate forms for each, otherwise, it may be a blank “no”.

5. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for their convenience.

6. Some organizations grant permissions for others. For example, the Copyright Clearance Center offers a "Republication Licensing Service" that may prove helpful: www.copyright.com. There may be a charge.

Note:
Permission need not be obtained for Alfred University theses, or American Ceramic Society publications.

Alternately:
You do not need permission if you significantly alter the table or figure with data of your own. Place a footnote indicating Adapted From (source).
